SUN DRIED FRUITS.

A Simple Process that Makes Fruits More Saleable.

Thursday, Charles Kelly brought some samples of St. George dried fruit to THE BUGLER office. Although this is sun-dried it will compare with the nicest dried fruits that comes from California. The peaches are white and clean; the plums almost transparent in their cleanness. This fruit commands the highest market prices always. It will fetch 10 cents a pound wholesale. There is a steady market for such fruit. All that required over the common way of sun drying are trays, a dry goods box, a little sulphur and a little care. The process is very simple. In a great fruit country like this the people should embrace with avidity any idea that will so greatly enhance the value of their products. Tree Inspector Kelly has free pamphlets for distribution treating on the drying method.—Bugler.

Keep the Hens Busy.

The great secret of securing eggs is really no secret, for every experienced person knows that everything depends upon the conditions. It is not always the breed or the feed that makes the hen lay. The main point is not to make a laying hen fat. If you have hens for market that are to be fattened, remove your laying hens. Keep the market hens confined closely, but keep your laying hens at work. The secret (if it is a secret) of making hens lay is to have them always busy at scratching. It is something they should be compelled to do from the time they come off the roosts in the morning until they go on again at night. The idle, lazy hen never lays. Do not forget the fact.—Rural World.
